

THE WINNERS' WAYS PODCAST

EPISODE 17: WHERE TO FIND YOUR NEXT JOB.

On today's show, I will be sharing some great sites where you can easily find jobs – if you are looking of course. With these websites, you will be positioning yourself to be at the right place and let the right people find you.

You know my mission is to help you to win in your career and finances.

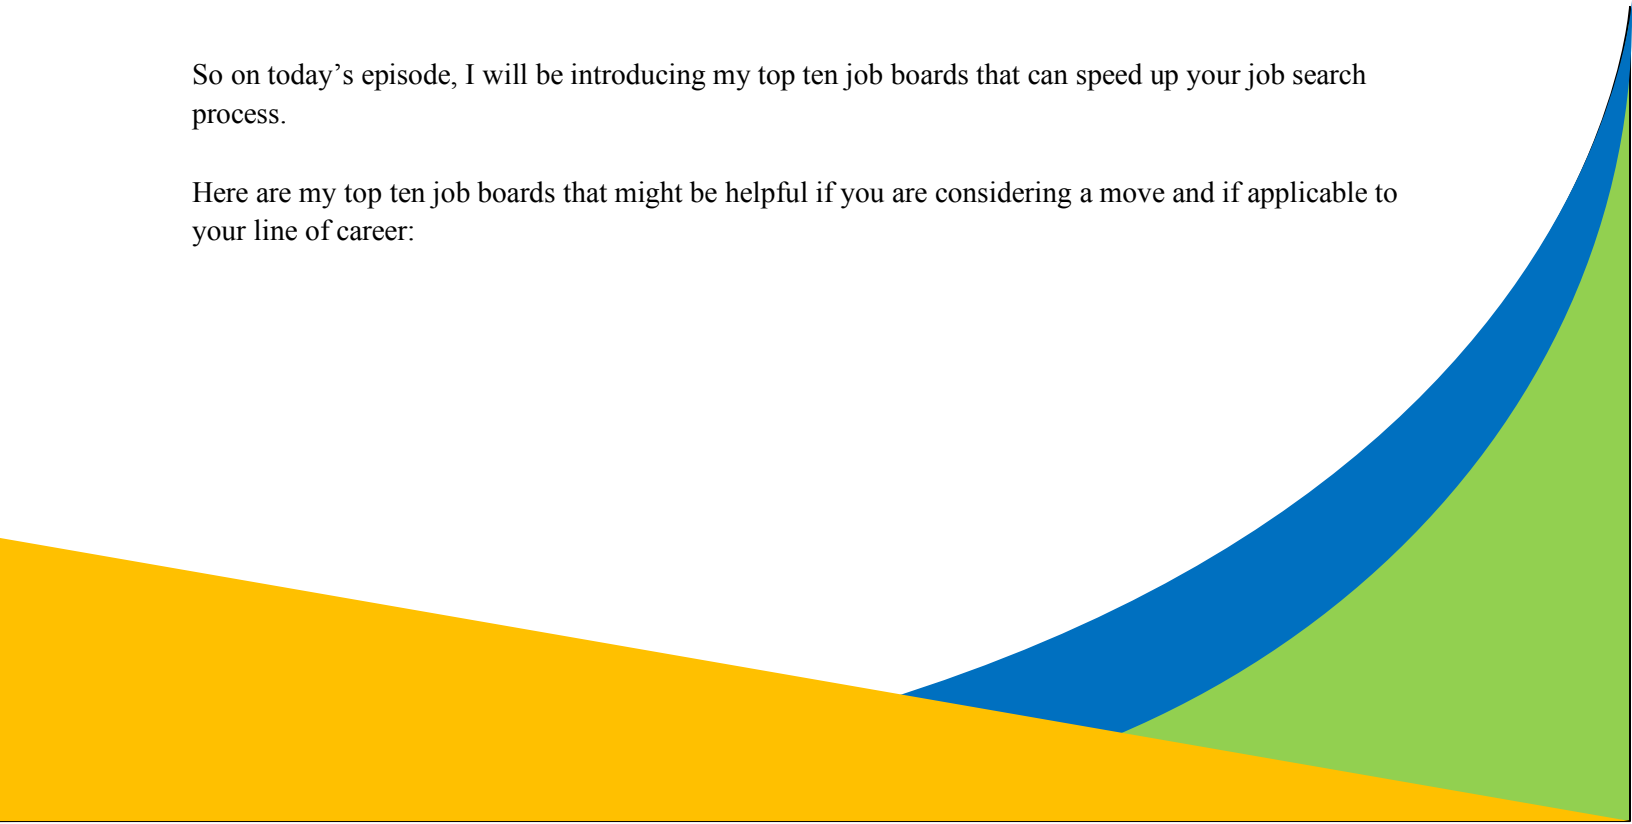

The job market in the USA is tightening up with the unemployment rate at historic low, but there are still millions of people looking for new opportunities. In a competitive world that we are today, as a potential job candidate, you need to be at the right place at the right time to get the right opportunity.

Most of the time, an opportunity will not suddenly knock on your door, you have to go looking for it. It is because of people that are either underemployed or unemployed that are looking for jobs that I made this episode. I want to help you speed up the process of finding your next career move.

Typically, people search for jobs on careerbuilder.com, Monsters.com, Ziprecruiter.com, or indeed.com, these are excellent job board, but they target wider market, they contain millions of jobs that you are neither qualify for nor interested in, therefore not very efficient. So I think the right approach is to narrow down your search by targeting job boards that have what you really want. I want you to use niche job boards that eliminates the one size fits all approach of the traditional job boards. It saves you time as well.

So on today's episode, I will be introducing my top ten job boards that can speed up your job search process.

Here are my top ten job boards that might be helpful if you are considering a move and if applicable to your line of career:

1. Collegerecruiter.com: CollegeRecruiter.com is a website established to meet the employment needs of current college students and recent graduates. You will find entry-level opportunities and internships without needing to go through volumes of postings that require more experience. I like their slogan “We believe that every college and university student and recent graduate deserves a great part-time, seasonal, internship, and entry-level job!”
2. Dice.com: Dice is the first place most technology job seekers look when searching for new opportunities. If you are looking to get into the tech industry, then Dice.com is your best bet.
3. TechLadies.com: Tech ladies niche down the tech job further by focusing on women. This job board connects with 50,000 tech ladies around the world and provide access to employment for them. They promote diversity, especially in senior roles.
4. Energyjobline.com: This is a job board that provides access to an energy-related career. So if you want to work in the oil & gas, power, or renewable energy industry, then head on to Energyjobline.com. This is available all over the world.
5. RemoteOK.io: As the name suggests, if you are looking for a job that you can work in the comfort of your house, then remote OK is the place to check. It allows you to work anywhere you want. That means you can be anywhere in the world and find a job on the remoteok.io website.
6. Engineering.jobs: Also as the name suggests, this is mainly for engineering jobs. Just register and upload your emails, then they will be sending jobs that match your profile to you.
7. Wellpaid.io: This is a job board predominantly for UK-based and remote candidates in the tech industry. They boast as offering the highest paying contract jobs in the tech industry.
8. Onewire.com: If your career field is in the finance industry, onewire.com allows you to apply for thousands of finance-related opportunities by creating just one profile.
9. SalesJobs.com: SalesJobs.com features thousands of sales jobs for sales professionals. They have an extensive database of over 700,000 sales positions all over the country.
10. USAJobs.com: If you don't mind working for the government, USAJobs is the best place to go for government related jobs.

Closing Thoughts:

I hope I've been able to serve you today by using these websites to make your job search process faster. The technological innovation has indeed turned the world into a global village. I want you to take advantage of the opportunity available to do what you love, by checking out these websites. The sites can save you time and energy and help to get your resume to the right person quickly.

